

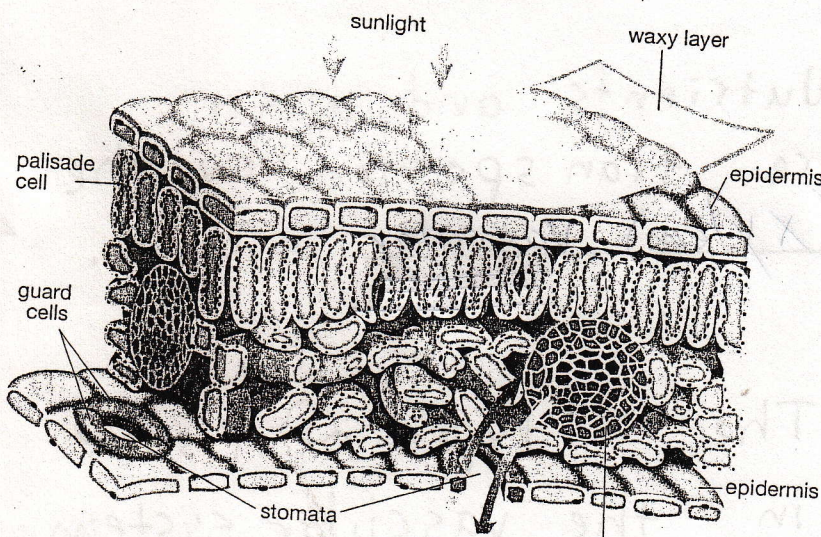

Figure 3.6 Xylem tissue conducts water from the root system to the shoot system in a plant. Phloem tissue carries sugars from the leaves to the rest of the plant.

8. Stomata allow air into the leaves.

9. The loss of water through evaporation is called transpiration.